Students show signs of vaping illnesses

Madison Consolidated Schools announced Thursday that eight students had been taken to King's Daughters' Hospital ER in the last four days with similar symptoms, including elevated heart rate, dilated pupils, fluctuated breathing patterns, some limpness or a loss of consciousness. Evidence of vaping, including pods and cartridges, has been confirmed in all situations, a news release from MCS said.

A ninth emergency transport Friday morning was confirmed.

Madison School Superintendent Jeff Studebaker said Friday morning that the school system still is trying to determine what substance made the young people ill. He said the school system asked Indiana State Police to have its labs try to determine what the students had come into contact with. "This stuff is dangerous," Studebaker said.

Studebaker said his concern is that there might have been more than one person or one source where students obtained the substance or substances, noting the difficulty of trying to control access to vaping pods and cartridges when they are readily available in multiple places including Internet sales.

"We are investigating a number of leads and encourage students to immediately cease use of these types of devices," School Resource Officer Jacob McVey said in the news release Thursday. "Our primary focus is to determine the contents and origin of these devices and what (if anything) may be contained in these pods."

Madison Schools also are working with King's Daughters' Hospital, Jefferson County Health Department, City of Madison Police Department, Jefferson County Sheriff's Department and the State Department of Health.

Additional nursing staff were sent to MCHS this week as a precaution to address any other cases until more is understood, the school said. The school said it was being as "diligent as possible" with hallway and restroom area supervision, but Studebaker noted Friday that one of the difficulties is that because the devices are so small and easily hidden, students can be using them anywhere on school facilities or buses without being noticed immediately.

In Indiana, the use of e-cigarettes and vaping among youth has risen more than 350 percent among high school and middle school students since 2012. The Indiana State Department of Health began investigating vaping-related severe lung injuries in early August 2019. The number of vaping-related lung injuries continues to rise steadily in Indiana and nationwide. This is a rapidly changing situation, and ISDH continues to gather data on cases and collaborate with local partners and healthcare providers, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the Food and Drug Administration to learn more about these lung injuries and determine potential causes. The CDC recommends that until more is known, people consider refraining from using e-cigarette or vaping products if they are concerned about these health risks.

Southwestern teacher charged with battery

By MARK CAMPBELL

A former Southwestern teacher who was arrested this week on charges that she battered and neglected one of her students on Dec. 16, 2019, was in court for her initial hearing in Jefferson County Superior Court Friday.

Catherine L. Davis, 39, of Madison, a former special needs teacher at the school, was involved in an altercation with a 14-year-old female student on two separate occasions on Dec. 16 in which she is accused of head-butting the girl in a Southwestern lunchroom.

Southwestern Superintendent Jeff Bates said Davis was an employee of the Madison Area Educational Special Service Unit (MAE-SSU), which provided services to Southwestern schools, at the time of the incident. He said per school policy, Davis was immediately placed on paid administrative leave until the incident could be investigated. At some point during that leave, the decision was made to terminate her employment and a temporary replacement was hired to fill that position on the faculty.

Indiana State Police Detective Joe Loyd started looking into the case on Dec. 17, 2019. That investigation — based on interviews with Davis, witnesses, the victim and surveillance video — determined that Davis head-butted the student in the school cafeteria during an incident at breakfast. In the second incident, which occurred later in the day, Davis was reported to have pulled the same student onto the floor of the cafeteria after food was spilled during lunch.

At the conclusion of the initial ISP investigation, the case was submitted to the Jefferson County Prosecutor's Office for review and the charges were then filed.

On Wednesday, a warrant was issued for Davis' arrest on two counts of battery, both Level 5 felonies, and two counts of neglect of a dependent, both Level 6 felonies. Davis was taken into custody without incident on Thursday and taken to the Jefferson County Jail.

After spending Thursday night in jail, Davis appeared for her initial hearing in court Friday where she reviewed

With river waters rising, both sides of Ohio teeter on flooding

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier staff writer

A couple of days of heavy rainfall over the huge region that drains into the Ohio River and its tributaries has most local counties teetering on the edge of flood stage and some residents already evacuating ahead of this weekend's projected crest.

Switzerland County Emergency Management Director Tom Moore said the river forecast for the lower gauge upriver at Markland Dam calls for the Ohio to crest at about 48.9 feet Saturday afternoon before leveling off on Sunday. That's just shy of the 49-foot mark that triggers action by the county but well below the 51-foot level that brings minor flooding.

Downriver in Jefferson County Indiana and Trimble County in Kentucky, where there are areas at even lower elevation, some roads are already disappearing under floodwaters and a few residents are getting out.

Robert Getz, whose family of four and two dogs lives in a rental house on Coopers Bottom Road near Milton, evacuated Thursday with water lapping at the pavement on his only way out. He spent Thursday night in another structure owned by his landlord and planned to stay Friday night at Clifty Inn but is looking for a permanent address out of the flood plain.

"We're looking to make a permanent move and pretty much get out of there," Getz, who works at Arvin Sango in Madison, said. "We're renting a room at the Clifty Inn but looking for a place in the Madison area because our kids go to Madison schools."

Getz, who has lived on Coopers Bottom since October, is facing his first high water situation there but some longtime residents have rolled with the river and flooding for decades.

"Fortunately the people on Coopers Bottom sort of take care of each other," said Andrew Stark, emergency services director for Trimble County. "And if they need help they can call us and we'll send help to evacuate them but it's better to get out sooner than to wait until it's flooding. If they need help call 911 and we'll be there but we encourage them to get out now if they think their area is going to flood."

Stark said one or two roads are already going under water in Trimble — Wises Landing Road and Burkhardt Bottom Road are always the first to fall — and Coopers Bottom could be cut off by sometime today.

Stark said Trimble experiences considerable flooding at 52 to 53 feet on Markland's lower gauge and if rain stops the county should be OK except for its lowest areas.

"We're just hoping we get no more rain, but the rain we're concerned about is the rain to the north and southeast of us. When they get rain, we get high water because water on the Ohio and Kentucky rivers all end up coming through here."

Governor signs bill delaying penalties from new exam

Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS — Schools and teachers won't be penalized for lower student scores on the state's new ILEARN standardized exam under a proposal the governor signed Wednesday. The bill signed by Gov. Eric Holcomb grants a two-year delay on schools receiving a lower A-F state rating based on scores from the 2019 or 2020 ILEARN exams. It also prevents the scores from being used in teacher evaluations, which are used in determining merit pay raises, unless the results would improve a teacher's performance rating. Holcomb and Republican legislative leaders called for the delay in August before the new exam scores were even released to the public. The bill passed with unanimous support in both the House and Senate. Holcomb says the delay will ensure that students, teachers and schools have the time they need to successfully adjust to the new exam. Statewide results for the spring 2019 ILEARN exam show that 47.9% of students in grades 3-8 met or exceeded proficiency standards in language arts and 47.8% met or exceeded them in math. Those are both more than 10 percentage points lower than the passing rates in 2018 for the pass or fail ISTEP exam. About 500,000 students took the new ILEARN test last spring after the Republican-dominated Legislature in 2017 ordered it as a replacement for the much-maligned ISTEP exams.

Woman sues, says fired refusing advances

EVANSVILLE — A woman says she was fired from her job at a prosecutor's office after she refused the advances of the county prosecutor, who she alleges handcuffed her, showed her a gun and tried to prevent her from leaving his hotel room during a business trip. Attorneys for Samantha Merideth filed the federal lawsuit Friday naming Vanderburgh County Prosecutor Nick Hermann and the county as defendants. It alleges that Hermann retaliated against Merideth after the alleged hotel incident and unfairly fired her last year. She's seeking a jury trial and unspecified damages. In her lawsuit, Merideth alleges that during a 2013 business trip to Chicago, Hermann made inappropriate comments during dinner and asked her back to his hotel room for a drink. There, Hermann allegedly put her in handcuffs in his room, put a gun on the room's desk and blocked her attempt to leave his room. The suit contends that Hermann then picked Merideth up, threw her over his shoulder and carried her back to a chair before she eventually fled the room, the Evansville Courier & Press reported. In a statement issued by his office, Hermann denied making advances toward Merideth and said he "adamantly" disagrees with her account of their interaction. He said Merideth told him later that he had made her uncomfortable, but that this was not his intention. Hermann said he and his office would not comment further about the lawsuit because it is pending. Merideth said she continued to work at the prosecutor's office until last year because the job was fulfilling and offered good benefits, and she didn't feel she should have to resign. She alleges in her suit that she was forced to resign as soon as Hermann — a Republican who was first elected prosecutor in 2010 — started a new four-year term as prosecutor in January 2019, and that her ouster amounted to wrongful termination.

Woman allegedly embezzled $327K

RICHMOND — An eastern Indiana woman who seemed upset when her employer offered her a promotion is now accused of embezzling more than $327,000 from the business following an audit by suspicious company officials. Denise Eileen King, 55, faces one count of felony theft for her alleged embezzlement from Logistics Revolution, a Richmond freight transportation company. The company's president told Richmond police that company leaders had attempted to promote King from an accounting position, but they found her reaction of concern to that offer strange and she subsequently resigned, according to a probable cause affidavit. After King quit, it was discovered that she had deleted files from her company computer, the (Richmond) Palladium-Item reported. An audit followed, and it eventually revealed that checks topping $300,000 had been written to another trucking company that Logistics Revolution had not done business with in years. King allegedly deposited $327,240 in fraudulent checks between November 2017 and October 2019 from Logistics Revolution into a bank account she had created, according to the affidavit. The Richmond woman then emptied that account by diverting those funds into her personal account, an account for a vehicle loan she had taken out and two accounts in the names of her children, the affidavit states.

Virginia woman accused of abducting 4 kids

her four children and leading authorities on a nationwide chase for several months was taken into custody Wednesday morning in Indiana, authorities said. Melody Bannister, 34, of Henrico, Virginia, was arrested at a gas station in Hendricks County, Indiana, by U.S. Marshals and local authorities after being on the run for more than four months, news outlets reported. Her children were found safe inside her car and were taken by the Indiana Department of Child Services. Bannister was wanted in Stafford County, Virginia, on four counts of abduction, filing a false police report, and violating a court order. The Stafford County Sheriff's Office said an investigation into Bannister began last June when she told deputies her children were being abused by a family member. The investigation by the sheriff's office and Child Protection Services determined that the accusations were baseless. Bannister went on a planned vacation shortly before the Stafford County Juvenile Domestic & Relations Court granted custody of the children to their father. Bannister refused to give the children up. She later petitioned for custody in Alabama but was ordered to return the children. Bannister fled and led authorities on a chase through at least eight states, including Wisconsin, Texas and Colorado. Bannister was being held in Indiana until she could be extradited to Virginia.

Probe finds dispatchers bungled fatal crash

MISHAWAKA — A 911 dispatcher speaking to a desperate driver who had veered into a frozen northern Indiana pond should have focused on advising her how to get herself and her three young children to safety instead of spending the beginning of the call trying to determine the pond's location, an investigation found. Research shows there is only about one minute for occupants to safely get out of a vehicle once it enters water, yet the dispatcher spent over 90 seconds during Brooke Kleven's New Year's Eve call trying to verify the location of the accident, according to a report released Wednesday. Meanwhile, a second St. Joseph's County dispatcher speaking to a bystander who witnessed the crash and called 911 erred by classifying it as an "accident" rather than a "vehicle in water," which delayed the response of a dive team to the location, the South Bend Tribune reported. It took 14 minutes from the time of Kleven's call for a diver to enter the pond in Mishawaka. The crash occurred when Kleven missed a curve on an icy road. Two of Kleven's children, 4-year-old James Kleven and 2-year-old Natalie Kleven, drowned. Brooke Kleven and her 3-month-old daughter, Hendrix Kleven, were critically injured but survived. The two dispatchers have resigned since the crash but likely would have been disciplined if they hadn't for failing to follow protocol in an emergency situation, Ray Schultz, the dispatch center's director, said in the report. Schultz said it's unclear why the second dispatcher did not use the dispatch center's software to correctly code the incident. But he also said it would be "pure speculation" to suggest that the outcome of the crash would have changed had it not been for the dispatchers' "missteps."

Senate OKs bill to limit running Medicaid

FRANKFORT — Urged to reduce Medicaid bureaucracy, the Kentucky Senate passed a bill Wednesday to limit the number of managed care organizations hired by the state to run its massive Medicaid program. The bill cleared the Senate on a 29-7 vote and now heads to the House. It would allow the state to contract with no more than three of the outside companies. The state currently has five managed care organizations handling most of the state's $11 billion-per-year Medicaid program. The bill reflects frustrations with those outside companies, which their detractors say cause higher administrative costs for health care providers. "Let's reduce the bureaucracy," said Republican Sen. Stephen Meredith, the bill's lead sponsor. "We don't need five managed care organizations that bring no value to the system whatsoever. All they do is deny payment and delay payment, period." Senate Minority Floor Leader Morgan McGarvey sympathized with those frustrations but said the bill won't fix the problems. The Democratic lawmaker said limiting the number of MCOs in state law "ties the executive (branch's) hands." The bill is moving through the legislature at a time the state is seeking bids from outside companies for about $8 billion in Medicaid business. Last year, Republican former Gov. Matt Bevin's administration awarded Medicaid managed care contracts to five companies.

Highway safety project planned for U.S. 60

FLEMINGSBURG — A highway safety project is planned to upgrade a section of U.S. Highway 60 in eastern Kentucky, transportation officials said. The project along six miles of the highway around the Rowan and Bath county line will realign a sharp curve and replace the Kentucky Highway 801 intersection with mini-roundabout, the state Transportation Cabinet said in a news release Thursday. The mini-roundabout is designed to improve traffic efficiency and safety by changing the intersection's traffic pattern, officials said. The project also will complete pavement improvements, new rumble strips, improved roadway markings, and new guardrails and signs on U.S. 60. State highway engineers will hold a public meeting Feb. 20 in Farmers to discuss the upgrade and talk about mini-roundabouts and how they work.

Funding announced for three waterway projects

PADUCAH — Funding has been announced for three major infrastructure projects. The Army Corps of Engineers will provide $63 million to complete the Olmsted Locks and Dam, $61 million for Kentucky Lock and $4 million for the Paducah floodwall, according to a statement Wednesday from U.S. Sen. Mitch McConnell. The Olmsted Locks and Dam has been operational since 2018, but work is still being done to remove Locks and Dam 52 and 53, which should be completed by the end of 2020, WPSD-TV reports. Construction on Kentucky Lock continues and is slated for completion in 2024. McConnell said the projects are vital to the region. "Billions of dollars of goods flow through Olmsted and the Kentucky Lock every year, supporting good jobs and helping build strong Kentucky communities along our inland waterways," he said.

Ex-teacher pleads guilty to dragging student

GREENUP — A former teacher seen on video dragging an elementary school student has pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor assault charge. The plea agreement reached Wednesday calls for Trina Abrams to serve 120 days of home confinement as part of a two-year probation sentence. The Daily Independent reported. Abrams was a teacher at Wurtland Elementary in Greenup in October 2018 when school video showed her dragging the boy by his wrists through the halls. The boy's mother, Angel Nelson, told news outlets at the time that her son's wrists were sprained. She said her son has limited speech and has been diagnosed with autism and other disorders. Abrams also agreed to forfeit her teaching certificate while on probation and will be prohibited from having contact with students. Nelson said she feels the sentence was fair and she and her son are moving forward.

22-year-old student makes history

Largest group of women to serve on IU Board of Trustees

By MICHAEL RESCHKE
(Bloomington) Herald-Times

In her first meeting as a member of the Indiana University Board of Trustees, Molly Connor made history.

The 22-year-old law student walked to the front of Alumni Hall in the Indiana Memorial Union last August. Her black high heels stopped near a white "X" on the red carpet. She raised her right hand and placed her left on former IU President William Lowe Bryan's Bible. Then, she recited the installation oath.

Connor is now part of the largest group of women to ever serve on the IU Board of Trustees at one time. It's something she described as exciting and wonderful, but also bittersweet.

It took nearly 200 years to get four women on the nine-member board. While IU started as a state seminary with only 10 male students, women have been admitted since 1867. It is now a majority female institution and has been since the late 1970s. Today, about 55% of IU students are women, 58% of IU staff are women and 55% of IU alumni are women.

"The board of a university should look like the university," Connor said.

At this point in the board's history, near equal representation of men and women is the exception. But for students at IU now, it's become the expectation.

HOW IT HAPPENED

The formation of this group of women was largely out of Connor's control. Indiana's governor appoints six of the board's nine members. IU alumni elect the other three.

There were two women on the board before Ind. Gov. Mike Pence appointed Melanie Walker in 2016. But that increase only lasted a year.

When student trustee Anna Williams' term ended in 2017, Gov. Eric Holcomb appointed Zachary Arnold, a 24-year-old medical student, as her replacement.

IU alumni elected Donna Spears, an associate broker for Coldwell Banker, in 2018. She defeated six other candidates. All were men, including incumbent Philip Eskew, who had served on the board since 2006.

In 2019, incumbent Mary-Ellen Bishop won reelection. Holcomb reappointed three board members, one of which was Walker. He also appointed one new member, Connor, to replace Arnold after his two-year term ended.

While Connor could not control the outcome of board elections or gubernatorial appointments, she did everything in her power to be selected.

PREPARATION

Connor realized she wanted to be a student trustee just after finishing her freshman year at IU in 2016. She was a staff member for a student government leader involved in the student trustee selection process. What Connor learned fascinated her.

"It was an incredible opportunity to serve students better," she said. "Like student government on steroids with more older people and more stakeholders."

For a while, it seemed like the timing wouldn't work out. Student trustees serve two-year appointments. Connor was on track to graduate a year early, making her ineligible to apply for the next opening.

Still, she kept checking the board's website every few months, learning more about what trustees do and how students can apply. Then things came together at the end of her final year as an undergraduate.

Connor had decided to pursue a legal education and was accepted to the IU McKinney School of Law in Indianapolis. Not wanting to squander her second chance, Connor started preparing in June 2018, two months before she could submit her application.

She called Arnold, the student trustee before her, to ask questions. The application required several essays, so she spent weeks writing. She asked loved ones to read them, then set up calls to talk through their critiques.

Her hard work paid off. She was selected for an in-person interview and told to prepare some talking points on the subject of college affordability. "I, of course, took that to the extreme," she said.

Connor reached out to everyone she could think of with an opinion on the topic. She called her aunt, who works for Case Western Reserve University. She called Daniel Romary, who was then the student trustee at Purdue University. She called Daniel Niersbach, who was IU Student Government president when Connor was vice president, several times.

At 8 a.m. the day of her interview, Connor walked into a room on the Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis campus with 14 people in it. They all listened as she talked, uninterrupted, for five or six minutes.

"If I could go back and find my notes, I'm sure I'd be horrified," she said. "I was so aggressive, I ran through it like a full presentation."

Whatever she said must have impressed the committee. Her name was forwarded to the governor's office. She was selected for a phone interview and then an in-person interview at the Statehouse. In July 2019, she was notified of her appointment.

NO SURPRISE

Despite her own misgivings, Connor's selection didn't come as surprise to those who know her.

"I would have been shocked if they had found another student more capable," Niersbach said.

The two met when Niersbach was a sophomore. Connor was a year younger and part of the IU Student Government internship program. She was bright, ambitious and easy to get along with, Niersbach said.

He thinks Connor would have been president if she hadn't graduated early. But in the time she did have in student government, she was able to make a change for women on the Bloomington campus.

During Big Ten student government conferences, Connor learned some peer institutions provided free feminine hygiene products in women's restrooms on their campuses. When she looked into the matter further, she found the idea of providing free feminine hygiene products was on IU student government campaign promise lists for years, yet never implemented.

"I told Dan (Niersbach), this needs to be on the policy list and it's going to get done," Connor said.

She started calling people at other universities where similar programs had already been implemented. She wanted to know how they paid for it, to ensure IU's program would be sustainable.

Then, Connor met with the director of the IU Health Center and Laurie Burns McRobbie, founding co-chair of the IU Foundation Women's Philanthropy Leadership Council. She was told the final approval would have to come from Tom Morrison, IU vice president for capital planning and facilities.

"I thought it was going to be a dogfight," she said. "I thought I was going to be fighting tooth and nail to get it approved."

Connor prepared accordingly. She put together cost estimates, a timeline for implementation and examples of what other schools had done. She thought through how she would reply if Morrison rejected specific points.

The meeting turned out to be anticlimactic. Morrison loved her ideas and agreed to fund the project.

THE WAY IT IS

Connor has a checklist of things she does to prepare for interviews and presentations. She admitted it can be excessive at times.

"I don't have an explanation for that," she said, "but that's the way it is."

And the way it has always been.

Growing up outside of Columbus in rural Elizabethtown, Connor thought she wanted to be veterinarian. Her mom suggested career shadowing to learn more about the profession.

At 10 years old, Connor started emailing veterinarian offices. Two agreed and those experiences were all she needed to realize that wasn't the job for her.

"It's sad. There's nothing fun about it," she said. "The only reason animals go to the vet is because they're sick."

It was around this time that Connor found what she did enjoy: working with people to improve institutions. She remembered trying to organize something called the fifth grade improvement team at St. Bartholomew School.

"I petitioned my teacher to let me tell her what I thought was wrong with fifth grade," Connor said.

That teacher, now an assistant principal at the school, said in an email she doesn't remember the fifth grade improvement team. But Connor's personality traits stuck out.

"Too many years ago," Julie King said in the email. "I do remember Molly being a very caring student who wanted to do well and liked to take the lead."

WHERE IT CAME FROM

When Connor was about 7 years old, her mom found her reading instruction manuals to the family's board games.

"When I asked what she was doing, she rather indignantly proclaimed that she'd finished all of her library books and was out of reading material," Kate Connor said in an email.

Kate Connor thinks her daughter's drive to succeed is innate. But perhaps the inspiration for Molly Connor's work ethic was too close for her mother to notice.

A few months ago, Kate Connor returned to Indiana to celebrate the 10-year anniversary of the yoga and Pilates studio she owns. She moved to Tokyo about two years ago with her husband, Dave Connor, an engineer who used to work for Cummins in Columbus, Indiana.

He is constantly working, Molly Connor said, boarding a train at 5 a.m., coming home at 6 p.m. and taking calls from people in the U.S. until 11 p.m. When Kate Connor was building her business, she was continually watching seminars on new training methods and attending chamber of commerce events to network.

"I've seen the fruits of what comes from hard work my whole life," Molly Connor said.

WHAT'S NEXT

At that August board meeting when Connor was sworn in, IU Student Government President Isabel Mishkin made a formal presentation on her organization's activities. Before and after the presentation, Connor could be seen locked in conversation with Mishkin.

"She wanted to make sure we felt we were listened to while we were there," Mishkin said.

It was the same way when Connor was a member of IU Student Government. Mishkin recalled Connor running meetings and knowing the details of what every committee was working on. She always wanted to know what she could do to help. And when she asked people questions, she insisted on detailed responses.

"They were qualities I wanted to have," Mishkin said.

Over dinner with Mishkin and Matt Stein, IU Student Government vice president, Connor talked about maintaining consistent communication through her term. It was clear to Mishkin that Connor believes one person can make a positive impact on the lives of many others.

Like Niersbach, Mishkin wasn't surprised when Connor was selected as a student trustee. She also thinks it's fitting that Connor is part of the largest contingent of women to serve on the IU Board of Trustees at one time. And while it was an important milestone in the history of IU, this is the level of representation Mishkin expects to see going forward.

"To me, this is going to be our new normal," she said. "More women like Molly."

County restoring services after cyberattack

By CAROL JOHNSON
(Bedford) Times-Mail

BEDFORD — Lawrence County continues to work to restore its computer network following a cyber attack that was detected early Thursday.

The attack resulted in a loss of phone service for county offices as well as the inability to access information. The 911 emergency system was not affected.

"Basically, we're bringing up systems and installing new equipment," Valerie Luchauer, Lawrence County emergency management director, said Monday.

She said phone service to offices in the Lawrence County Courthouse and Courthouse Plaza was expected to be restored by Tuesday.

The source of the attack remains unknown. Luchauer said she and others involved don't believe private information of county employees or the public was breached.

"Our employees were all advised to check with their banking institutions and so far everything is fine," she said.

All information relating to elections also was unaffected.

"When we found out we had a problem, our IT staff was very proactive and began disconnecting servers," she said.

As soon as the attack was confirmed, public safety was the number one priority, Luchauer said. The county's IT staff worked to provide service to the sheriff's department for essential services. During the time period officers and dispatchers did not have access, the Bedford Police Department assisted by running driver's licenses and license plates for the county.

"The city of Bedford was very helpful and stepped up to assist," she said.

The county has insurance to

Once the network is restored, Luchauer said the next step is determining what data can't be accessed and how to restore it.

While computers at the Lawrence County Jail were also affected, neither jail security nor the care of the inmates were ever compromised, Shoults said.

Shoults said he's been with the department for about 22 years and it's the first time the computer systems have been crippled to this extent.

Mitch Daniels’ call for a civics exam faces faculty test

By DAVE BANGERT
(Lafayette) Journal and Courier

WEST LAFAYETTE – As details emerged Friday of what future Purdue students might have to prove about their civics literacy before they can get a diploma – a proposed graduation requirement that would, in a way, mirror the test given to naturalized citizens, plus other steps during a college career – Trustee Malcolm DeKryger turned to Purdue President Mitch Daniels.

Did those proposed specs, DeKryger wondered, meet the goals Daniels had set out when he challenged faculty a year ago to come up with a way to address what he called a national crisis in basic civics literacy?

Daniels said: “Absolutely.”

Daniels’ conclusion after Friday’s trustees meeting was that a faculty committee hashing out the details about a possible civics literacy graduation requirement had “probably made it better than I could have come up with.”

“I just sort of threw up a jump ball,” Daniels said about his initial request of faculty in January 2019.

Whether it will be enough to get through the University Senate – a faculty-led body that would need to sign off on any new graduation requirements that has been skeptical of Daniels’ assumptions and goals on this, whether civics literacy really was a problem among the student body or whether it was really Purdue’s job to fix – is still in doubt.

Those conversations are expected to start publicly in March, with a vote by the faculty possible by the end of the spring 2020 semester.

Cheryl Cooky, chair of the University Senate, on Friday laid out a rough outline of a possible graduation requirement, developed by a working group of political science, education and communications professors on the West Lafayette campus.

First, students would have to pass a civics literacy exam sometime between their freshman and senior years.

In addition, they’d need to complete one of the following:

- Earn three credit hours – equivalent to most one-semester classes – of relevant course work, such as an introductory course in U.S. politics, public policy history or “other course with civic knowledge content.”
- Complete online civics pieces being developed by Purdue’s Center for C-SPAN Scholarship and Engagement.
- Attend “civics-related, Purdue-hosted and (Purdue)-sponsored events.”

“I think it’s important to say that this is coming from faculty who are experts in this space, who are working in this space,” Cooky said. “This isn’t just a Mitch Daniels thing. This is of concern in spaces of K-12 education, is of concern and focus in pollical science and communications and so on. I think that will help to communicate to the broader faculty about the value of this.”

Much of the legwork was done by Phillip VanFossen, a professor of social studies education and director of the Ackerman Center for Democratic Citizenship, and Jay McCann, a political science professor.

Daniels initially suggested an off-the-shelf test could be ready by the time freshmen arrived for the fall of 2019. Instead, after faculty leaders tapped the brakes on that schedule, McCann and VanFossen created a test to measure the civics acumen of students as they arrived on campus to calibrate what Purdue was working with and what it might need to do.

McCann and VanFossen gave a 28-question test – based on similar tests from the Woodrow Wilson Foundation and the American National Election Study – to incoming freshman in August. They found that 77.8 percent of incoming Purdue students who responded passed – which meant they scored the 60 percent or better naturalized citizens are required to hit. That compared to 36 percent of the national sample of Americans who passed, as reported by the Woodrow Wilson Foundation.

That meant Purdue students were coming in ahead of the average American sample. But McCann and VanFossen, in an email with the J&C, said “there were clearly different passage rates,” depending on race, ethnicity, Indiana residency and whether they were international students.

For the test side, McCann and VanFossen said Purdue would need to develop it own set of questions, likely based on the National Assessment of Educational Progress for civics and its specifications for a 12th grade assessment. The framework, they said, would deal with questions about the foundations of the American political system, the roles of citizens in American democracy and the relationship of the United States to world affairs.

Wife shot; spouse charged

A Trimble County man has been charged with assault-first degree domestic violence after shooting his wife twice late Wednesday night or early Thursday morning at their home on U.S. 42 West.

The woman survived the attack and was taken to University of Louisville Hospital with a gunshot wound to the leg and another to the chest. She has since been released from the hospital and is recovering.

Anthony Howell, 55, of 7090 U.S. 42 W, Pendleton, Kentucky, was arrested at the scene and taken to the Oldham County Detention Center in La Grange, Kentucky.

He is scheduled to appear in Trimble County District Court Feb. 18.

Kentucky State Police were dispatched to the house at 1:06 a.m. Thursday after the central dispatch received a 911 call requesting an ambulance.

The incident, investigated by Kentucky State Police Detective Steve Goodale, appeared to have taken place after the two had been drinking and arguing at their home. Goodale said Howell first told police the shooting took place during that argument and later said the gun, a 9 mm. handgun, discharged accidentally. There were no children at home.

Goodale said the incident is still under investigation.

includes 10 questions pulled from a list of 100 about key historic dates, duties of the branches of government and facts such as these: Why are there 50 stars on the U.S. flag? What are the first three words of the Constitution? We elect a U.S. senator for how many years?

Meanwhile, the Center for C-SPAN Scholarship and Engagement – a center created by C-SPAN founder and Purdue graduate Brian Lamb – has been producing 15-minute podcasts using clips and stories from the network’s archives stored on campus.

Connie Doebele, managing director of the C-SPAN center, said examples include one on freedom of speech that tells the story of the cross-burnings in America that led to the Supreme Court and another on presidential power, which includes the story of Watergate.

“In addition to the podcast, there would be ancillary materials on a website to assist students in understanding the concepts,” Doebele said. “The Center does not take a position on whether there should be ‘testing’ for students. We’re trying to be part of the solution by contributing materials that can help students reach the goal of being better informed.”

What would count as a “civics-related” event on campus wasn’t immediately defined.

Cooky told trustees – who have been anxious over the past year to see something done about Daniels’ recommendation – the proposed graduation requirement is making its way through University Senate channels. That starts with the Senate’s Education Policy Committee.

Andy Freed, a professor of earth, atmospheric and planetary sciences, said the committee has the recommendation and is expected to discuss it in the coming week.

“I think that most of my colleagues agree that increasing our student’s knowledge of civics, how our national works and the ways students can get involved is a good thing,” Freed said. “But how Purdue should address this is very uncertain with a wide range of opinions. The (Education Policy Committee) will try and facilitate some of the discussion to hopefully help the university move forward in a productive direction on civics literacy. It will be interesting to see how this plays out.”

Cooky said plans were to present the recommendation to Purdue Student Government, too. Student leaders had mixed feelings a year ago about Daniels’ proposal – sympathetic to his call for Purdue grads to have a solid civics background, but chilly to having one more thing to add to their plates.

If the University Senate signs off on the recommendation by the end of the school year, Cooky said faculty would ask for a year to develop a test and the other requirements. She said it could be ready by the time freshmen arrived for the fall 2021 semester.

Senate approves bill prohibiting requiring microchips

By ALEXANDRA KUKULKA
(Merrillville) Post-Tribune

References to a 1970s television show were made Wednesday before the Senate Pensions and Labor Committee approved, in a 9-1 vote, a bill related to device implantation as a condition of employment.

The bill, which was unanimously approved by the Indiana House of Representatives, would prohibit employers from requiring a potential employee or current employee “to have a device implanted or otherwise incorporated into the candidate’s body as a condition of employment,” or when being considered for a promotion or for “additional compensation or benefits.”

State Sen. Jon Ford, R-Terre Haute, one of the bill sponsors, told the Senate committee Wednesday that other states, such as California, and other countries that have seen an increase in people implanting microchips “the size of a grain of rice” to access their house, phones and cars. In response, some states and countries have started considering regulations on the use of data gathered, Ford said. Indiana should consider similar action with the proposed bill, he said.

In recent years, BioTeq, an England-based company, has implanted at least 150 employees with microchips. BioTeq has also shipped microchips to companies in Spain, France, Germany, Japan and China, according to published reports.

Biohax International a Swedish company, makes chip implants and has approached British legal and financial firms about implanting microchips in their employees, according to published reports.

According to the American Veterinary Medical Association, microchips implanted into pets do not pose a threat to the owner’s privacy because the only information stored is the animal’s contact information.

State Sen. Chip Perfect, R-Lawrenceburg, said that because employees could voluntarily get microchips, it seems the bill is “ahead of the curve.” Perfect ultimately voted against it.

“I want to make sure we’re not going to get ahead of technological advances,” Perfect said.

Ford assured the committee that the bill, if signed into law, “won’t stop us from coming back in 20 years” to revisit the bill if there are technological advances.

The Indiana legislature will have to come back to revisit the bill way before 20 years pass because of technological advances, said Indiana’s Building Trades Unions Executive Director Pete Rimsans.

Rimsans said he refers to the bill “as the Col. Steve Austin bill,” in honor of the 1970s television series “The Six Million Dollar Man,” in which the main character, Lee Majors, is given bionic limbs and implants.

Governments and corporations could soon be dealing with lawsuits related to device implantation, Rimsans said. He gave the example of an employee losing an arm in an accident, a corporation paying for the employee to receive a robotic arm and then the employee quitting after a month.

In that situation, Rimsans said, there will be a legal question of “who owns that arm?”

“I expect technological advances,” Rimsans said. “It should be the free will of the individual.”

He said the nicotine content in the devices becomes so addictive that students sometimes cannot overcome the urge to use the devices.

Studebaker said his hope is that the school can come up with a plan to help students get the help they need.

School officials acknowledged the cases and presented a larger, continued concern regarding the use of e-cigarettes.

Numbers from the Indiana Department of Health, which report 62 confirmed cases of vape-related lung injuries, five deaths and 62 probable cases in the state have been recorded since August 2019.

Fifteen of those cases were patients ages 13-17 and the majority — 57 confirmed or probable cases — were 18 to 29 years old.

Indiana has one of the highest rates of vape-related lung injury in the Midwest, according to data from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. The only states with as many or more cases in the region were Minnesota and Illinois, which has 200-249 cases and ties with Texas for the highest rate of incidence.

E-cigarettes were pushed to the forefront of public health concerns after a rash of lung injuries and deaths were reported for the first time last year. Since then, lung injuries from vaping have amounted to 2,758 hospitalizations and 64 deaths in the U.S. as of Feb. 4, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

It is not legal for people younger than 21 to purchase vaping devices or e-cigarettes. In December, President Donald Trump signed legislation raising the federal minimum age of sale of tobacco products from 18 to 21 years, which includes all e-cigarettes and flavor cartridges. The Food and Drug Administration issued a ban on flavored vape cartridges that it says appeal to children, such as fruit and mint flavors. Larger “tank-based” vaporizers that customers can manually fill were left exempt.

As for what injuries the Madison students sustained and their general conditions, that will remain unknown unless their legal guardians authorize the release of information, said Dave Ommen, public information specialist for KDH.

“Even if there are times when basic things can be released, it still remains very, very basic if they give authorization — a lot of times confirming if someone is there, or confirming a very, very general condition without getting into anything too specific about what their health condition may or may not be,” Ommen said.

In keeping with the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act, or HIPAA, Ommen said KDH would not disclose medical information about minors unless OK'd by a parent.

Patient verification still is required with adult patients and any patient can request privacy status, meaning the hospital cannot confirm they were in their care. Timing is also a factor.

“If we have the full name of a person and it is an adult, we can check to see the status of whether the patient may or may not be here, but again, that will depend on factors of whether they’re currently being evaluated or if they’ve been admitted, and then whether that patient has requested privacy status,” Ommen said.

Ommen said the same laws apply to schools wanting to know the conditions of their students. He said he is not certain of any exceptions to the rule.

“We’re always going to err on the side of protecting the patient’s privacy, so there may have to be some additional authorization involved for that information to be released even back to the school,” Ommen said.

Madison has already worked to prevent emergencies by educating students on the health risks and setting up a tip line for SROs on its website, McVey said in August after vaping surpassed cigarette use in high schoolers statewide.

McVey said the vapes — which can look similar to USB drives and are hard to recognize — are common at the middle and high school, and he’s found them on students as young as third grade.

Any first-time-offending student is put through a program that requires community service hours, a class on tobacco and e-cigarettes and a Powerpoint presentation that they present to an SRO or administrator.

“We tell them ‘Hey, this isn’t so much a discipline issue as it is we care about you and your health,’” McVey said.

While not on the scale of this week’s events, McVey said he had seen some students have allergic and other adverse reactions to the juices in e-cigarettes. He’s constantly having to confiscate them, he said.

“I’ve had to confiscate six this year,” McVey said at the time. “And we’re only a couple weeks in.”

Students, school employees or parents with more information can report a tip to SROs at <https://asp.schoolmessenger.com/madisonk12in/quicktip/index.php>

the charges before Magistrate Nancy Jacobs in about a 30-minute appearance in which Jacobs entered a not guilty plea for Davids and heard arguments from both Jefferson County Deputy Prosecutor Elizabeth Stigdon and Public Defender Della Swincher on whether Davis should have to post bail or be released on her own recognizance and on the terms of that release in either instance.

The prosecution had asked for a $10,000 bond in the case plus conditions that Davis have no contact with the victim and no contact or supervision of any other minor including her own children. Stigdon argued that despite Davis’ formal training and years of teaching special needs children, the presence of multiple witnesses and video surveillance equipment showed she was “unable or unwilling to control herself” during the incident with the student.

Swincher argued that Davis had no past criminal record, that the allegations reflected an isolated incident and that Davis has done no wrong in regard to her own children or any others in the weeks since the incident at Southwestern. She said Davis has had no contact with the student and noted that she has “medical conditions” that would make incarceration an issue in terms of her health and that a pretrial report had indicated she was a low risk for flight.

Jacobs said that while details outlined in an Affidavit of Probable Cause were “disturbing,” Davis’ lack of criminal history — especially in terms of violence to others — her low risk for flight, the fact that she had shown remorse for the incident during interviews with police and had refrained from further contact with the student, was evidence contradicting a higher bond. In terms of Davis’ ability to care for and supervise her own children, Jacobs agreed that Davis had been doing that without incident in the weeks since the incident.

In the end, Jacobs ordered Davis to be released without bond and allowed to care for and supervise her own children but have no contact with the victim or supervise any other children.

Jacobs noted “this may not be popular with public sentiment or those on social media,” but the court presumes innocence until a defendant is proven guilty, and part of that process is allowing defendants release from jail pending trial with bond relative to the risk for flight and threat to harm themselves or others, and both factors were low.

When contacted about the case Thursday, Bates declined to answer questions on behalf of the school corporation. He said a statement had been prepared and read it to The Madison Courier.

“The school corporation and the Madison Area Educational Special Service Unit conducted a thorough internal investigation at the time it learned of allegations and took all appropriate action to protect the health and welfare of its students,” Bates said, reading from a prepared statement on behalf of the school corporation. “The Southwestern Jefferson County Consolidated School Corporation does not comment on personnel matters, including matters involving former employees. Accordingly, the school corporation has no comment regarding the Jefferson County Prosecutor’s actions.”

Bates declined to say whether the student or Davis were injured in the incident. But court records gave no indication of anyone seeking medical treatment after the incidents.

MAESSU, based in Madison, provides educators and assistants for a variety of special needs programs ranging from autism spectrum to visual impairment as well as other disorders, disabilities and impairments ranging from communication disorders to emotional, mental and learning disabilities and orthopedic impairments. Other school corporations served by MAESSU include Switzerland County, Scott County District 1 and Clarksville Community.

RECORD BREAKER

Webster writes his name into Trimble County history

Senior becomes Raiders' career scoring leader

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

WARSAW, Ky. — Gallatin County rallied from 11 points down in the third quarter to beat Trimble County 79-76 and spoil Reece Webster's record-setting night.

The Raider senior scored 14 points in the game to become Trimble's all-time leader in scoring, getting the record bucket on a short jumper from the left side with 3:34 left in the first quarter.

Webster's record-breaker, coupled with Trimble's impressive play through three quarters, almost led to a perfect night. But a Gallatin County fourth-quarter rally forced the Raiders to settle with just the individual accomplishment.

"When I was freshman I was like, there is no way I was going to get it," Webster said. "As it got closer I got kind of anxious, but I'd take a win over the record any time."

Trimble County High School has not kept scoring records throughout its history and it was only through the efforts of The Madison Courier and local sports historian Travis Calvert, a Trimble graduate, that any totals were located and compiled. As a result of that research, it was discovered that Matt Roberts held the career scoring mark with 1,523 points in 2006, just five points more than former Raider standout Tony Jett.

With Roberts' total in mind, Webster began putting himself into position for the record last year as a junior. Despite a slow start to this season, he was able to reach the mark with two weeks left in the season.

"It means a lot but without my teammates and coaches, it wouldn't have happened at all," Webster said. "I've got the best teammates and coaches in the world."

"A lot of what happens this year isn't about winning and losing. You're not going to remember what your team record is five years from now. It's the experiences along the way, that's where the magic is," said Trimble coach Marcus Mumphrey, himself a career scoring leader at Carroll County. "Our underclassmen getting to see something like this, I really think it's something to grow from."

Webster's record-setting bucket was his first of the game — he came in just one point shy of the mark — and helped kick-start a run that seemingly put Trimble in the driver's seat.

Trailing 13-10 at the time, Webster pump-faked, stepped to his left, and drained the mid-range jumper to pull Trimble to within one point. Gallatin County immediately stopped the game with Gallatin coach Jon Jones presenting Webster the game ball.

"That says a lot of coach Jones right there. To stop the game and award a visiting player, that's all class," Mumphrey said. "He didn't have to do that. I'm a big coach Jones fan."

The ceremony didn't stop Trimble's momentum; instead, it amplified it.

Lawrenceburg outlasts Cubs in three overtimes, 63-60

By ROB LAFARY
Courier Staff Writer
sports@madisoncourier.com

Desperation for victory led to an extra 12 minutes of basketball before Lawrenceburg willed its way to a 66-63 triple overtime victory to deny Madison on senior night at Salm Gym Thursday.

Despite the Cubs' best efforts late, the outcome remained the same for Madison for a seventh loss in a row.

"I was satisfied with our effort but there's going to be five plays in a game that determine the outcome," Madison head coach Sherron Wilkerson said. "You don't know when those plays are going to be so anytime you fall asleep, one of those plays can happen. I thought we fell asleep at the wrong times tonight."

Madison (10-9) didn't lead in the game until the 6:07 mark of the fourth quarter when a Luke Miller layup gave the Cubs a 40-39 advantage. The Cubs then held a two-point lead until Lawrenceburg's Mitch McCool tied the game with two free throws with 51 seconds remaining to force the initial overtime period.

Through the first two overtimes, both teams held leads only to see them quickly evaporate and put another four minutes on the clock.

Gavin Yoon hit back-to-back shots with 2:41 left in the first overtime and Lawrenceburg led 52-47 but Madison cut the deficit to one after Mason Welsh answered with a 3-pointer and Miller connected on a freebie. The Tigers got a response again off a bucket by Yoon a minute later to lead 54-51 but Miller came up big yet again, this time drilling a three to tie the game

The Cubs were in control of the second extra frame and led 59-58 with 57 seconds to go on a free throw by Jared Ferguson only to have to play catch up after Garrett Yoon's three from the left wing put Lawrenceburg in the driver's seat 61-59 with just 28 seconds left. But as he had in the first overtime, Welsh answered the call for Madison, this time from the free throw line en route to knocking down a game-tying pair at 0:23 to send the marathon into triple overtime.

But in the game's final four minutes, Lawrenceburg mustered up just enough to never trail the rest of the way and escape with the win.

Three free throws by Gavin Yoon put the Tigers up 64-61 at the 1:26 mark but Nick Center answered for Madison to trim the advantage to 64-63. Time then slipped away with 53 seconds ticking off the clock before the Cubs fouled Dahya Patel with 16 seconds left. He knocked down both freebies to put the Cubs behind 66-63.

Welsh managed to shake free on the game's final play for what would have been a game-tying 3-pointer but the shot fell short at the buzzer.

Wilkerson said the loss serves as another teaching moment as Madison continues to deal with the adversity of another loss.

"At this level it comes down to who is the toughest," Wilkerson said. "The teams in this state that are successful are tough, mentally tough and know how to deal with adversity. We are

• Webster

Webster followed with another basket to put the Raiders ahead and a 3-pointer by Ryan Long put Trimble up by four. A 10-2 run that was capped by a Webster trey at the start of the second quarter then pushed the lead to 20-15.

Trimble County (5-19, 2-3 North Central Kentucky) kept the pedal down and led 32-25 at halftime and 43-32 midway through the third quarter on a Long transition basket before Gallatin finally got its groove back.

The Wildcats (13-13, 5-2 NCKC) began scoring in chunks and quickly ripped into the lead. Gage Ashcroft hit three 3-pointers over the final 12 minutes of the game, Hayden Dickerson added a trey and Gallatin had four three-point plays over the span to finally surge ahead, 61-60 on an Ashton Gullion basket with 5:21 to play.

Gallatin's lead eventually reached eight (73-65) before Trimble mounted one final run, pulling to within three at 77-74 on two Dylan Jennings free throws with 17 seconds to go. But Zach Johnson hit two free throws on the other end for Gallatin and Trimble, now out of timeouts, could only muster a Cameron Blackaby basket right before the final buzzer.

Mumphrey was disappointed to get the loss, but proud of the way his team battled.

"For me, personally, it's really hard to hold onto anything when we lose, but I'm really proud of the guys. They all played so much better collectively," Mumphrey said. "The plan that we had for Gallatin County really worked it was just some defensive break-downs. It's not that we shot the ball bad or taking crazy shots, it was just a few defensive let-downs. In my opinion, that was the key to the game."

Long finished the game with 16 points to lead Trimble while both Webster and Jennings had 14 points and Beau Turner scored 11.

Jamin Rassman, Gallatin County's do-everything point guard, scored 31 points to lead all scorers while Ashcraft hit six threes and finished with 18 points.

Trimble returns to action on Saturday when it travels to Owen County as part of a boys-girls doubleheader. The Raiders then head to Bellevue on Monday.

in the learning phase of that process right now. It's a hard process. We have the talent, now we have to understand how to develop the hard work."

Madison's biggest concern on the night was on the defensive end despite only allowing 46 points through regulation.

Much of that had to do with Lawrenceburg leading scorer Gavin Yoon, who terrorized Madison en route to a game-high 35 points on 12-of-22 shooting including a 10-of-15 inside the arc. Madison was slow out of the gate, and Yoon dominated his way to 17 points in the first half for the Tigers to lead 28-20 at halftime. He also took over when the game was on the line late, especially from the free-throw line where he finished 9-of-11.

Making matters worse was Madison's inability to keep Lawrenceburg out of the paint. Using their physical style of play to their favor, the Tigers penetrated the Cub defense, scoring 18 points in the paint and drawing contact underneath to pave the way to 18 made free throws.

Madison put a stranglehold on both areas to get back into the game late in the second half, but never could consistently do enough at the start or the finish to finally pull out a win.

"We couldn't get stops," Wilkerson said. "For us it was all about the defensive end. I said if we took five charges we would win the game and we took one. They had one player, their best player, score 35 points. We told the guys all week and in the huddle, it was going to come down to points in the paint and we gave up too many of them. That's being tough. We've got to learn to be tough. That's the next step for us."

Madison struggled from the field and shot just 21-of-55 for 38% including a 5-of-18 clip from beyond the arc for 27% but managed three players in double figures.

Welsh, a senior playing in his final home game, led the Cubs with 19 points to go with seven rebounds. Center was 7-of-11 from the field and scored 17 points to go along with five assists and Miller added 14 points and eight rebounds.

Welsh and fellow senior Jared Ferguson — who had three points in the game — were honored prior to tip-off and Wilkerson spoke highly of both afterwards.

"Those two guys have been absolutely wonderful," Wilkerson said of Welsh and Ferguson. "They are terrific young men on and off the floor and are so coachable. They've had three coaches in four years and considering the circumstances they've tried to do what we have asked. They have done their job as senior leaders and to implement the philosophy we have tried putting in here into this program."

Madison (10-9) now closes out the regular season with a four-game road slate. The Cubs were to travel Friday night to Class 3A No. 5

Greensburg before returning to Hoosier Hills Conference play next Friday at Columbus East.

Panther men recover from slow start to whip Anderson

COURIER STAFF REPORT

sports@madisoncourier.com

Hanover College recovered from a slow start to pull away for a dominating 73-46 win over Anderson in Heartland Collegiate Athletic Conference men's basketball Wednesday at home.

Neither team could find the basket early and Hanover led just 9-5 nine minutes into the game. But over the final 11 minutes of the first half, the Panthers outscored Anderson 25-14 to take a 34-19 lead at the break then turned the game into a rout in the second half.

Kevin Williams and Matt Weimer each scored 14 points to lead Hanover while Isaac Hibbard had an impressive double-double of 10 points and 13 rebounds. Weimer also had six assists and five rebounds.

Malik Laffoon scored 10 points and was the only player in double figures for Anderson (10-12, 7-8 HCAC).

Hanover's win allowed the Panthers to remain one-game back of Franklin in the HCAC standings. Now 16-6 overall and 10-5 in the league, Hanover visits Bluffton Saturday and to Transylvania on Wednesday.

Women win 8th-straight

Hanover women's basketball kept pace with league-leader Transylvania with a 67-62 win at Anderson on Wednesday.

The Panthers, who have won eight-straight, improved to 14-1 in the HCAC, one game back of eighth-ranked Transylvania and five games ahead of third-place Franklin, which is 9-6.

Hanover actually trailed Anderson through three quarters and entered the fourth down 46-42. But the Panthers outscored the host Ravens 25-16 in the final quarter to pull out the win.

Four of the five Hanover starters reached double-figures in scoring, led by preseason all-American Alexis Nall who had 17 points and five rebounds. Savannah Courtney had 16 points and four steals, Switzerland County's Brooke Todd had 12 points and Kristin Mills score 10.

Payton Moore had 27 points and 12 rebounds to lead Anderson while Lexi Dellinger had 13 points.

Honors for Lou Knoble

Well-known artist, retired teacher recognized

Well-known Indiana artist and retired local teacher Lou Knoble (second from right) was honored at the Madison Cub Basketball game Saturday, Feb. 1. Kelley Hoagland (left), marketing and donor relations manager of the Community Foundation, presented an original Knoble painting to MCHS Fine Arts Academy Director Aaron Kelsey (far right). Assisting with the presentation were Fine Arts Academy students Emily Ward and Dillon Miller. (Photos courtesy of CFMJC/Nina Campbell)

The Community Foundation of Madison and Jefferson County honored Lou Knoble Saturday, Feb. 1, at the Connor K. Salm Gymnasium of Madison Consolidated High School for his contributions to the Madison Community.

Knoble spent many years as an art teacher at MCHS, coached cross country at MCHS and Hanover College, and is a well-known Indiana artist.

To recognize his contributions, the Community Foundation donated an original Lou Knoble painting to the high school Fine Arts Academy, so present and future students will see Knoble's talent and contributions.

In addition to the artwork, the Community Foundation announced that Knoble's friends, family and members of the community have established the Lou Knoble Gift of Art Fund in his honor.

Annual grants from this fund will be made to the MCHS Fine Arts Academy to support art enrichment experiences and special programs for the students.

To make donations in honor of Knoble for this fund:

- Cash or check can be dropped off or mailed to the Community Foundation at 416 West Street, Madison or at the Madison High School office during school hours. For checks, put "Lou Knoble Fund" in the check memo.

- Donate by credit card online at www.cgmjc.org
- For gifts of Stock and IRA Distributions, call Bill Barnes at 812-265-3327 for more information.

Established in 1991 by a group of local volunteers, the Community Foundation of Madison and Jefferson County fulfills the mission of building a strong, vibrant community by helping donors provide perpetual funding for the people, projects and passions of Jefferson County.

For more information about the Community Foundation and its permanent endowments, go to www.cfmjc.org, call 812-265-3327 or email info@cgmjc.org

Knoble thanked the crowd for its standing ovation and for being fans of the Madison Cubs.

Oldham County author to discuss underground railroad

The Jefferson County Historical Society will host author Nancy Theiss Tuesday Feb. 25 at 5:30 p.m. to discuss and sign her book "A Tour on the Underground Railroad along the Ohio River."

The book covers a large portion of the 664 miles of the Ohio River that separated the free soil of Illinois, Indiana and Ohio from the slave soil of Kentucky. The book began in 2018 after Theiss, executive director of the Oldham County History Center, led a tour on the Underground Railroad that followed the Ohio River. On this tour, Theiss said she realized a book was needed to "connect" the dots between the relationships of freedom seekers and Underground Railroad conductors.

Nancy Theiss

"I realized that I could not always be available to take people along this journey, and other museums, just like ours, have made significant progress in documenting these places, and unknown heroes of freedom," Theiss said.

"The tour was the result of our own research and archaeology programs that we have made on Henry Bibb, since 2005, who became an outspoken abolitionist and conductor after his painful journey as a slave and his escape to freedom," Theiss said. "Our archives hold some amazing slave papers that show transactions between the sale, capture and ownership of slaves in our own local court system before the Civil War.

"Included in the archives are the Mount Family Papers that detail transactions of Oldham County jailer James Mount and his wife, Amanda Mount, who were slave holders. Because of our work, we achieved recognition by the National Park Service on the National Underground Network in 2018, which makes us the only site in Kentucky with two designations."

For more information, contact the Oldham County History Center at 502-222-0826 or email info@oldhamcountyhistoricalsociety.org

The scholarship that are being offered are the Marion Stackhouse Memorial Scholarship, two Collegiate Farm Bureau Scholarships and 10 Carolyn Hegel Memorial Scholarships. The scholarship money can be applied to tuition, housing, books and other educational expenses.

The Marion Stackhouse Memorial Scholarship is a $1,000 scholarship named after the former Indiana Farm Bureau president, who served from 1976 to 1987. The scholarship is awarded to one student annually based on educational successes and career aspirations.

The Carolyn Hegel Memorial Scholarship is a $500 scholarship named after the long-time Indiana Farm Bureau second vice president, who served the organization for 26 years. There are also 10 additional district scholarships that will be awarded.

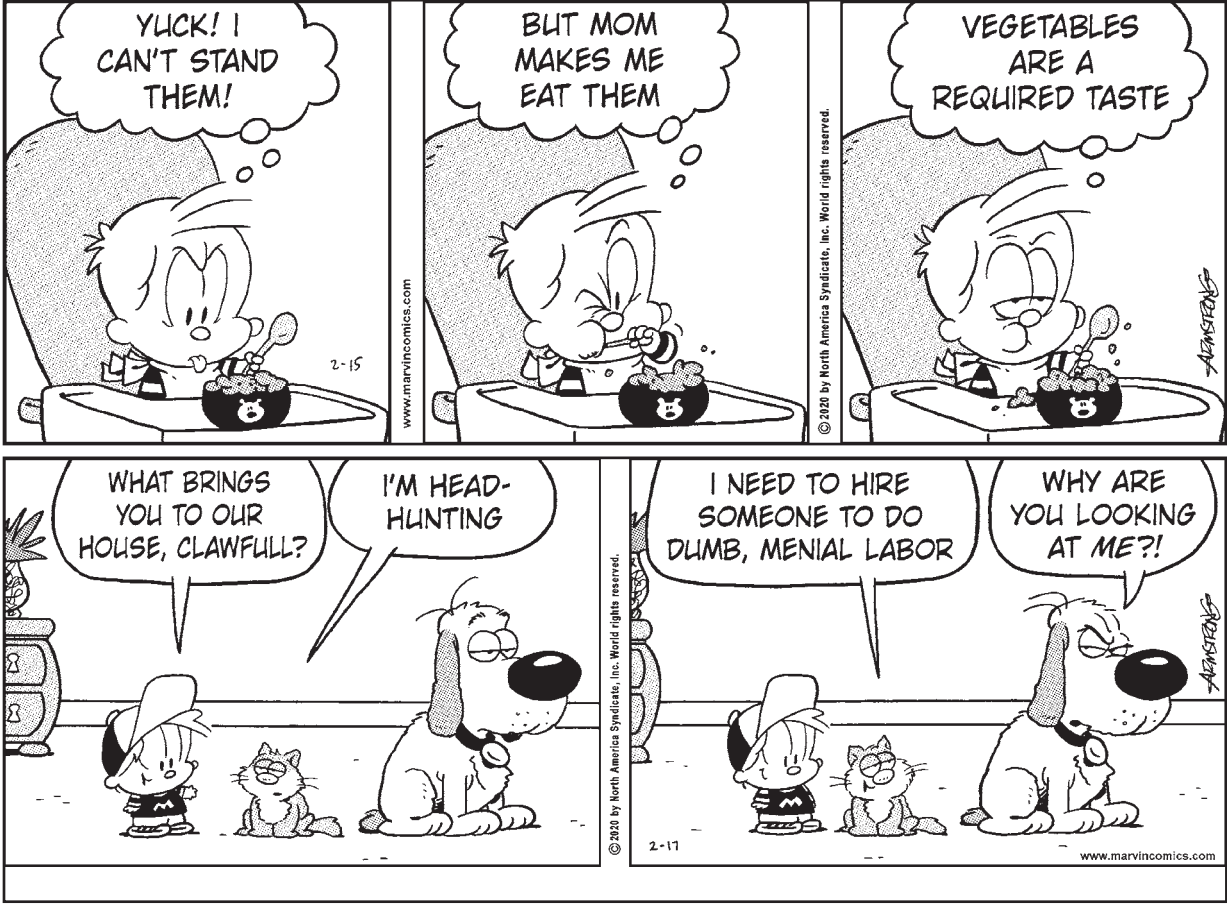

Applicants for the Stackhouse scholarship and the Hegel scholarship must be incoming or current college students pursuing a degree in agriculture and members of Indiana Farm Bureau.

For existing collegiate Farm Bureau members, the Indiana Farm Bureau awards two $1,000 scholarships annually. Winners of these scholarships must be members of an Indiana Farm Bureau collegiate chapter at Purdue University, Vincennes University, Huntington University or Ancilla College.

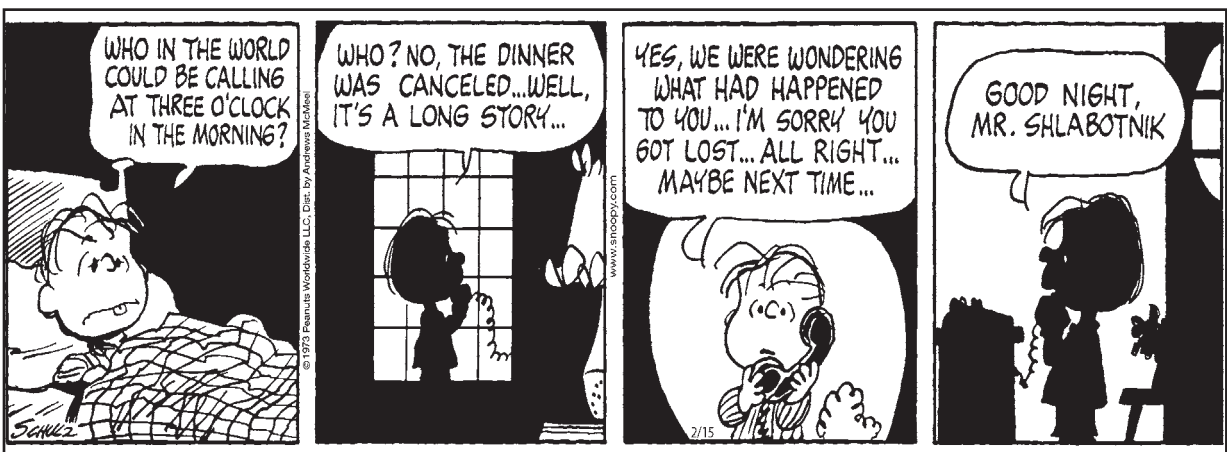

The deadline to apply for these scholarships is March 1. The application asks students to detail their educational successes and answer several questions about their future educational and career goals. To apply for a scholarship, go to Indiana Farm Bureau's scholarships and grants page at www.infarmbureau.org/scholarships

For more information, go to www.infb.org and go to the Grants and Scholarships page under the Resources tab.

BRIDGE

AFTER FOUR SUITS AND FOUR ROUNDS

This week, we have been looking at fourth-suit game-forcing. This occurs on the second round of the auction after the opener has bid two different suits and the responder has bid a third suit. When the responder rebids in the fourth suit, it is artificial. He is probably uncertain of which game will be best but might be thinking about a slam.

In reply, if the opener has a stopper or two in the fourth suit, he usually bids no-trump. Often, the responder will want to reach three no-trump but does not have a stopper in the fourth suit. (Responder, with the fourth suit well held, can bid no-trump himself.) Without a fourth-suit stopper, or with no interest in no-trump, opener does something else. Perhaps, as here, he gives preference for the opener's first-bid suit, which leads to the final contract of five diamonds. If North had rebid three notrump, South would have passed, and the contract would surely have died. Luckily, North investigated further.

What did South do after West led the heart king?

South had to lose one spade and one diamond, but just in case the trump split was bad, declarer had to be careful. He won with dummy's ace, then ran the diamond 10. When West ducked, declarer

Bacteria bully is brother-in-law

Dear Annie: When my brother-in-law is sick, he loves to cough. He says he wants to spread his germs around. Recently, we went out to eat with him, and he coughed into his hands and not into his elbow. He kept coughing throughout the meal. No one wants his sickness. I find it difficult to be around him.

My brother-in-law is also a bully, and I believe this is part of his love of bullying — spreading illness to others.

Please tell people to stay home when they are sick, cough into their elbows and see a pulmonary specialist if their cough lasts more than a month. — Sick of the Chronic Cougher

Dear Sick: Your brother-in-law is sick in more ways than one. Shame on him. I should hope this is common sense by now, but in case anyone needs to hear it: Covering one's mouth when coughing or sneezing isn't just polite; it's a simple and effective way to reduce the spread of germs. It is best to keep tissues handy so that you can cover your mouth and nose when coughing or sneezing and promptly dispose of the used tissue. Then thoroughly wash your hands with soap and clean running water. If clean running water is unavailable, the CDC recommends using an alcohol-based hand sanitizer that contains at least 60% alcohol.

Dear Annie: I am writing for a friend who is at her wit's end. More than 40 years after completing his education, her husband is being sued for a student loan that he says was paid off 30-plus years ago. They have never had any letters or phone calls saying he still owed student loans in all these years. He has lived in the same house for over 25 years. He worked for state government for a number of years and then worked for county government. No one contacted him about this student loan. After so long, my friend is unable to locate any paperwork about the loans to prove that they were paid off all those years ago. The bank that made the loan has changed hands several times, and they don't have records going back that far.

My friends are in their retirement years, and they are having to pay back thousands of dollars because of this. They are saying that he also owes interest. The original loan was only for $3,000. So far, they have paid $8,000, with no end in sight. The only reason they started paying it back is because they were told they would be sued if they didn't.

They have talked to senators and representatives and even hired a lawyer, but what it amounts to is they have no proof they paid it. I believe it is some kind of computer glitch, but no one is able to defend them against the Department of Education.

I just wonder if what happened to them is happening to other people all across the country. Is there anywhere you can refer these people to go for help? — Sickened by Friend's Situation

Dear Sickened: I feel extremely frustrated just reading about your friends' situation. I can't imagine living it.

Too many things seem not to add up here: For instance, wouldn't this have been negatively impacting his credit score all these years? Something is definitely awry.

I wish I could offer actionable advice, but I'm afraid that the best I can do is print your letter and let you know if I hear from anyone who has experienced this firsthand and knows a course of action.
